McGhee Productivity Solutions Announces Partners

DENVER, CO, May 29, 2009 – McGhee Productivity Solutions (McGhee), international consulting services firm focused on corporate productivity and cultural transformation, today announced that John Wittry and Cindy Whiston have been made company partners.

"John and Cindy have contributed tremendously to the success of McGhee over the past six years," said Sally McGhee, Founder and CEO. "Their unparalleled level of commitment to McGhee's work is mirrored only by their passion to be of service to the community; each embodies what McGhee has long stood for – integrity and dedication in service to our clients."

John and Cindy lead strategic McGhee programs with executive level clients across a multitude of industries, while also developing and managing new corporate alliances.

Prior to joining McGhee in 2002, John held senior management positions in a variety of industries including medical research, the pharmaceutical industry, and as General Manager of a design and marketing firm. As Director of New Product Development at McGhee, John has successfully launched eLearning products that have supported thousands of clients sustain their productivity results.

"As a partner, my main effort will be to continue to support our clients in their pursuit of alignment, focus, integrity, and accountability in both their personal and professional lives," said John.

Cindy's background is Information Technology, with twenty plus years experience in management, marketing and sales. Based in McGhee's Northwest Territory, Cindy has responsibility for McGhee's 25-year partnership with Microsoft, while also managing McGhee's relationships with multiple Fortune 500 companies.

"McGhee's priority is our clients' success; we help them to stay focused on their strategic imperatives while also managing the tidal wave of tasks, emergencies, meetings, and e-mail overload – all with an eye towards work/life balance. It's possible and McGhee's growth as a company speaks to the power of our client results," said Cindy. John added, "Through my experiences at McGhee, I have learned how to set very clear intentions for my professional and personal life and have a systematic approach to proactively manage both, which has allowed me to create a life that I love. I am excited to have this opportunity to continue to reach into the corporate realm helping leaders and their teams achieve the same."
