FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

MCGHEE PRODUCTIVITY SOLUTIONS EXPANDS EMAIL OVERLOAD AND WORK/LIFE BALANCE SERVICES TO CANADA, AFRICA & MIDDLE EAST

DENVER, CO, March 25, 2008 – In an effort to broaden its reach in support of corporate customers seeking to increase organizational effectiveness, McGhee Productivity Solutions has hired Sue Faubert and Lanre Onasanya as Consultants serving Canada and the Africa/Middle East region respectively.

Based in Ottawa, Canada, Sue Faubert brings over fifteen years of experience conducting training programs, facilitating workshops, and developing customized course materials in both professional development and computer application. She is widely recognized for creating dynamic, energetic learning environments for both public and private sector clients.

Lanre Onasanya comes to McGhee from Microsoft Corporation where he previously worked for 7 years as the Public Sector Lead for Eastern and Southern Africa covering 14 countries. Working from South Africa, Lanre brings vast experience in leadership, government and corporate development. His accomplishments include facilitating successful partner and government collaborations in 7 of the least developed countries in the region.

“We are extremely pleased to have both Sue and Lanre on the McGhee team,” said CEO Sally McGhee. “In addition to their technical skills, they both bring a passion for helping people achieve their personal and professional goals. Their contributions will further our message internationally that one can reclaim one’s life from information overload with our proven techniques and methodology.”
