Take Back Your Life™*

DENVER, CO, February 3, 2009 – McGhee Productivity Solutions (McGhee), leader in providing tools to optimize productivity through technology, turns its focus inward by taking the philosophy “practice what you teach” to the next level. The company plans to revamp its information technology platform and welcomes Phil Marks as Director of Operations and Technology.

Phil brings 20 years of information technology experience and a wealth of corporate IT leadership to this role. He will be responsible for transforming existing platforms into cohesive, effective systems that will adhere to the proven productivity methods and models currently in place at McGhee.

From a strategic perspective, Phil has a strong sense of direction and understanding of the market, which stems from his extensive experience as a major contributor to companies such as Excel Communications and Intersil Corporation. Phil’s technology initiatives at Excel Communications aided the company’s growth from $30 million to $3 billion in earnings over a three-year period. At Intersil Corporation, he led the largest information technology migration in the history of the company using his cross-functional expertise in planning and management. For the last five years, he has exuded strong leadership and organizational skills as owner and CEO of Websoft Design, LLC, a privately held organization that specializes in helping small businesses succeed.

Phil will ensure that McGhee’s technology, direction, and strategy align with its operational performance and processes to deliver on the company’s core values. “Success is a result of empowering yourself and others to believe anything is possible – then identifying the technologies to support such dreams,” proclaims Phil.

McGhee Productivity Solutions is pleased to have Phil Marks as a valued leader whose guidance and fresh perspective will positively affect its employees, clients, and long-term success.
